

CLAIMS

We claim:

5

1. A method for handling messages among group members of a work group, the method comprising:

receiving a message from a first group member;

associating the message received from the first group member with a container;

10

making the container available to selected group members so as to make the message from the first group member available to such selected group members;

receiving a message from a second group member;

associating the message received from the second group member with the container;

15

making the container available to such selected group members so as to make the message from the first group member available to such group members, together with the message from the first group member.

20